

Editorial

With this issue, the Sri Lanka Journal of Food and Agriculture (SLJFA) completes two years of publication of high quality research of global significance. Being just two years old, the SLJFA has been able to establish a fully-fledged journal office and has launched its official website (http://www.slcarp.lk/journal\_intro.php). With a view to ensure the journal is accessed by a wider audience, the SLJFA is now listed under Sri Lanka Journals Online (<https://sljfa.ubiquitypress.com/>), where the pdf versions of the papers published can be downloaded.

The journal will appear in a new format from the issue 1 of volume 2 that will be published in mid-2017. It will continue publishing a rich variety of outstanding research articles on a broad range of exciting topics. The remarkable increase in the number of papers received since mid-2016, is encouraging and provide evidence for the growing acceptance of the journal as a forum to publish high quality research articles. In this context, the Editorial Board of SLJFA places high regard and appreciate the services rendered by the reviewers of the articles submitted to the journal.
